

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A soap dish comprises an open first container including a plurality of parallel slits on a bottom; and a second container fitted in the first container, the second container including a plurality of rows of cones on a bottom, the rows of cones being adapted to support a soap, and a plurality of rows of apertures each row of apertures being disposed between two adjacent rows of cones, wherein water stored in the second container is adapted to carry off through the rows of apertures by passing the cones; and outside air is adapted to reach the soap via the rows of apertures.